

JOHN CALICCHIO SUPPLIES MOVIE STUDIO WITH HIS NEWLY RESTORED 1970 TRIUMPH BONNEVILLE!

Triumph 650 Bonneville 1970

I received a call from Steve Kovacs asking to borrow my 1970 Triumph Bonneville for a new movie he was directing. I got to attend the pre-screening party and meet the actors; it was Fun Stuff!

'68 is a 1988 film directed by Steven Kovacs. The film follows a full year of a Hungarian family living in San Francisco in 1968.

The father escaped the Soviet invasion of Budapest and now runs a Hungarian restaurant that is not doing well financially. The younger of his two sons is gay and struggling with coming out. His dad disowns him when he finally does. The older son is involved in the counterculture, gets kicked out of college, buys a motorcycle, starts dating a Maoist, and is also disowned by his father. The older of the sons runs afoul of an outlaw motorcycle club; the younger of the two sons gets drafted but is rejected because of his homosexuality. The older one joins his younger brother in a gay rights protest.

Major events of the year such as the assassination of Martin Luther King and the assassination of Robert F. Kennedy are interspersed throughout the plot and depicted in the film using stock footage.
