

DISNEY STUDIOS RENTS JOHN'S '67 CONVERTIBLE

In the late 90's, I restored a 1967 Chevelle convertible which I bought for $4500. It had a straight body, but needed everything. It was one on my favorite projects. A rarity, as it came with a hi-performance 327 engine, power-steering, power-disc brakes, and power-windows. One evening, I received a call from Disney studios asking to rent my car for a shooting session with the Cheetah Girls. They asked me to meet them at the studio which turned out to be a location in the Palmdale Desert. The session lasted for several hours, longer than it took to drive her there and back. It was a fun experience and I got to meet a bunch of great people. As I was driving out, I remembered a long time ago; 1960 something, when my mom took us kids to Disneyland where we had a fulfilled day. In the midst of our frolic, my brother got lost. Back then it was customary to check with the lost and found on Main Street. We walked over there only to find Walt Disney and his wife sitting on the park bench holding my baby brother in their laps waiting for us to reunite. It was a memorable moment.
