

JOHN RENTS MOTORCYCLES FOR THE FALL GUY SERIES

Remember Lee Majors, the 6-Million dollar Man? In 1985, I received a call from 20th Century Fox asking to rent nine motorcycles for their weekly series of the Fall Guy. They asked me to stay on the set for a week to make certain the motorcycles ran properly. What I saw that week became etched in my mind forever; it was like being a part of a flying circus and while there was always action going on, I came away with a new respect for the stunt guys. One of the first stunts was called a "Chain-off", where two motorcycles had their front forks connected to a post with about thirty feet of chain inconspicuously coiled in the dirt. This particular episode had two motorcycles parked in front of a saloon waiting for the bad guys to come running out, only to jump on the motorcycles, start them up and taking off. Well, need I say more, at 40mph when the coiled chain reached the end, the two riders went sailing over the handlebars. Wow! Next, two other riders were to go flying off a cliff on two other motorcycles into a water reservoir, when immediately afterwards, the director asked I could get the bikes running again so he could get another camera angle. I had all of this fun while receiving a check for $17,000 (1985 money).
